

Student sheet 7-1: Drawing Conclusions¹

Inference: an idea suggested by the facts or details in a passage

Conclusion: a decision about what may happen or about the result an event may have

Making Inferences/Drawing Conclusions

NOTE: Making an inference and drawing a conclusion are very similar skills. Each requires the reader to fill in the blanks left out by the author. An author may not include information for several reasons: they may think you already know it, it may not seem important to them or they may want you to find the result.

How to make an inference or draw a conclusion:

- 1) Observe all the facts, arguments, and information given by the author.
- 2) Consider what you already know from your own experiences.
- 3) When faced with multiple-choice questions, determine whether each option is true or false based on the information in the passage.

Example 1:

“The woman waited nervously in line. When the counter was empty, she carefully unloaded her items from her cart. Lines creased her forehead as if to show the calculations ringing up in her head. Finally, the cashier began ringing up the items as the woman clutched her purse”.

Inference/Conclusion: The woman may not have enough money to cover the cost of her groceries.

- A. Think about the facts of the passage and what may result from them.
- B. Think about causes and effects. The writer may only provide a list of effects, so you have to figure out the cause.

Example 2:

“The child stood on the sidewalk clenching her ice cream cone. Beads of sweat collected on her little nose as she furiously licked at the ice cream dripping down her hand.

”Try saying “If ...then...”  If the girl is sweating, then it may be warm outside.
